

Cosmic Frequency

Memory, Light, Time

A thought provoking insight on stellar identity and the soul

Memories are not memory as in the past but rather spheres of information representing etheric pulse rhythms in the ether.

I am that which illuminates the light

Light is the byproduct of a movement in the ether. We truly never see light we see the effects and aftermath of specific frequency harmonics that are translated into what we call light. Etheric waves are picked up on by our “senses” and translated into what we call light.

Time travel through memory

Each event has a vibration and frequency. A memory is set at a certain frequencies, match this frequency and find yourself at the event be it astral or physically. This is relative to each person.

Cosmic Frequency

Cosmicfrequency.org

Cosmic Frequency

Memory is not linear. A memory can also be from the future. We can create memories through feeling. Think of an event you would like to experience, but think of it as if it already happened. When you do this you create a “memory” that gets projected into your experiences thus bringing you the events and circumstances to make that memory true. This is experienced as the linear movements through your life that lead to that “future memory”

Memory is not just a past experience. Memory is a pocket of information within the medium we call ether therefore a memory serves as a node of consciousness that has linear like progression, when observed by another consciousness. This linear like progression gives context and sensibility but should not be confused with “past future “but rather seen as its own sphere its own event.

The Prism of Light & Multiple Selves

Many starseeds and lightworkers, shadowworkers starwalkers often try to pin themselves into one category of cosmic identity. Be it, Arcturian, Andromedian, Pleiadeian etc.

What if we are more than one race at the same time? This requires us to move our ideas around a bit and expand our perception of ourselves and ultimately that of reality.

I will share the prism analogy that will serve to allow those who are ready to broaden their horizons and allow them a more grounded yet expanded version of self.

Cosmic Frequency

Cosmicfrequency.org

Cosmic Frequency

If you take a prism and shine a white light through it, the prism will project different colors. These Colors can be seen as the basic rainbow spectrum. When we take this analogy a step further we can see that each color is actually just the original white light again. The colors we see are due to the refraction and reflection of the white light that is passed through angles as it moves through the prism.

In other words, each color is specific to the atmosphere it may find itself in giving it the illusion of separation. It can be observed that each color now holds its own unique frequency that is set apart from the others. Furthermore, we notice that, though they are at different frequencies, all of the colors are STILL enmeshed and flow together in an ombre type form. (think of a rainbow)

When we apply this analogy to the spiritual path and ones stellar identities, we can clearly see how we can be “different colors” aka different races of being at one time. As soul is not a solid thing that can be pushed into one body and only that one body, the soul is akin to the white light shining through the prisms that then unfolds to give us the illusion of being “different colors” or different races.

Just as the prism can maintain and projects different colors, we as soul can maintain and project different experiences for ourselves. Another key to remember is that the colors of the prism were all connected and were the same source in the end. The same is true with us we are the same source and can teleport between each version of self in a very real way. Considering that each aspect of us is... well US, we have access to that part of us through thought and feeling. We can move our consciousness focus point from the blue color to the purple, to the green and back to blue if we so choose... This is the power we have..

Cosmic Frequency

Cosmicfrequency.org

Cosmic Frequency